Odds and Ends of Gossip.

Memorial Day

Old, old men in carriages, trundling along so slow;
Old, old men a-marching, with the spirit of long ago;
Old, old flags furled straitly, dreaming of sword and shell;
All that is left of the old war, save the tale the histories tell.

Young men marching briskly, all in their khaki brown
Heroes of Santiago or far Manila town.
Wounded, they never weakened. They suffered and yet the sang.
And over the land long shackled the hymns of Freedom rang!

O white heads bowed and feeble! O brown heads high and proud,
We love you and pray God bless you! we who stand in the crowd.
And we thank the merciful Father that, all our history through,
He has given us such a memory and such a hope as you:
—Youth's Companion.

LAW BREAKING.—The item published in this paper last week giving an account of the great numbers of dead fish found at a certain point along Chaplin river supposed to have been killed by some one using dynamite, calls to mind other evils and violations of the game laws of the State. The streams of Washington county abound in fine fish and would afford excellent sport in the way of legitimate fishing several months out of the year if the proper attention was paid to the protection of the fish against wanton destruction such as the incident refered to above. Strange to say however we find in this county good men—men who would be insulted should they be declared law breakers, who violate the law for the protection of fish right along and openly. The game laws of the State expressly prohibit the use of seine, net or trap for the capture of fish in any of the streams and yet we venture to say that there is not a mile of Beech river or Chaplin in the county that is not seined or in which a fish trap is not set. These fish are sometimes brought into town in large numbers and sold. There is a special penalty against dynamiting fish and that practice is consequently not so openly carried on, but all such business should be stopped and let the fish be preserved for the benefit of people who fish for the sake of the sport.

REDUCED—The State Board of Equalization at Frankfort was pursuaded by the delegation composed of Judge Litsey, T. S. Mayes, Tom O'Bryan and Robt. Noe, who went from here for that purpose to reconsider the raise in the tax valuation of Washington county. Each year the assessment of the county has been raised but through the efforts of some representatives of the county a part of the raise has always been taken off. This time the raise of two per cent was entirely reduced and the assessment now stands just as reported by the County Board of Tax Supervisors. The assessment of the county for this year is about $1,800,000 for real estate and $400,000 for personalty.

A GENTLE HINT.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the deaths resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syrup kept about your home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption, Hemorages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. Never go away from home without a bottle of Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. Change of climate, change of apartments, or exposure may bring on a cold which nothing but this famous remedy will cure. Good druggists sell it.

Geo. L. Heard of High Tower, Georgia, writes: "Eczema broke out on my baby covering his entire body. Under treatment of our family physician he got worse as he could not sleep for the burning and itching. We used a box of "Banner Salve" on him and by the time it was gone he was well. The Doctor seeing it was curing him said, "Stick to it for it is doing him more good than anything I have done for him." Wood & Wimsatt

Bad Accident.

Miss Artie Isaacs, daughter of J. W. Isaacs, of Riley, met with a distressing accident last Thursday. She and her younger sister, children like, accompanied her father to the farm for a load of cord wood. Returning, the two children were sitting on the wagon, when Nannie, the younger daughter, asked Artie to move over to where she was sitting. The girl attempted to do so, lost her balance and fell to the ground between the wheels. Her father heard her scream and stopped the wagon. Looking around he saw his little daughter pinned to the earth, the left wheel with its weight of cord wood resting on the child's leg. Her limb was crushed terribly. Dr. Evans was hastily summoned and dressed the wound. Artie bore the pain heroically and was doing well the first of the week. —Lebanon Enterprise.

Biliousness is a condition characterized by a disturbance of the digestive organs. The stomach is debilitated, the liver torpid, the bowels constipated. There is a loathing of food, pains in the bowels, dizziness, coated tongue and vomiting, first of the undigested or partly digested food and then of bile. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets allay the disturbances of the stomach and create a healthy appetite. They also tone up the liver to a healthy action and regulate the bowels. Try them and you are certain to be much pleased with the result. For sale by Haydon & Robertson.

Kentucky is the home of the Feuds.

Nowhere is the feud so common, so deadly, so presistant, as in the Kentucky mountains. Nowhere else is there such organization, such division of enmity to the limit of kinship.

About thirty-five years ago two boys were playing marbles in the road along the Cumberland river—down in the Kentucky mountains. One had a patch on the seat of his trousers. The other boy made fun of it, and the boy with the patch went home and told his father. Thirty years of local war was the result. The factions fought on after they had forgotten why they had fought at all. While organized warfare is now over, an occasional fight yet comes over the patch on those trousers and a man or two is killed. A county as big as Rhode Island is still bitterly devided on the subject. In a race for the legislature not long ago, and the feud was the sole issue. And, without knowing it, perhaps, a mountaineer carried that patch like a flag to victory, and sat under it at the capital—making laws for the rest of the State.

That is the feud that has stained the highland border of the State with blood, and abroad has engulphed the reputation of lowland bluegrass, where there are, of course, no feuds—a fact that sometimes seems to require emphasis, I am sorry to say. Almost every mountain county has, or has had its feud. On one side is a leader whose authority is rarely questioned. Each leader has a band of retainers. Always he arms them; and some times houses and clothes them and sometimes even, he hires them. In one local war I remember, four dollars per day were the wages of the fighting man, and the leader on one occasion, while besieging his enemies—in the county court house—tried to purchase a cannon, and from no other place than from the State arsenal, and from no other personage than from the governor himself.—From The Southern Mountaineer, by John Fox, Jr., in the May Scribner's.

Brought Back from Idaho

Deputy United States Marshal Hooper returned Saturday with John W. Bomar, formerly postmaster at Buffalo, Ky., who is charged with having stolen $149 from the Government. Bomar was arrested in Boise City, Ida., and he had a preliminary hearing at Moscow, Ida., before the United States Commissioner. He was held over in the sum of $1 500. He decided to defer giving the bond until the Government had brought him back to Kentucky. Deputy Marshal Hooper and Guard Harry Burnett made the trip. Bomar's trial will come up at the February term of court.—Courier-Journal.

Miss Mamie Smith, Middlesboro, Ky., writes: "My little sister had the croup very bad, I gave her several doses of Foley's Honey and Tar and she was instantly relieved. It saved her life." Wood & Wimsatt.

The examining of applicants for certificates to teach in the public schools of Marion county was held in the public school building last Friday and Saturday. There was 28 applicants, which was larger than the usual number, and a very good showing was made. Out of the number, 14 secured first class, 11 second class, and one third class certificates, making a total of 26 successful applicants out of the 28 who took the examination. The examination of colored applicants will be held tomorrow and the day following.

Mrs. mary Belle Coleman died at the home of her husband, Mr. C. B. Coleman, in this city Friday afternoon, May 17, 1901. Mrs. Coleman had been an invalid for about two years, but she bore her suffering with resignation and true christian fortitude, until the angel of death came and relieved her of suffering. She had only been a resident of Lebanon a few years but during that time she drew around her a circle of friends who loved her for the truly christian virtues which she possessed, and her friendly, and cheerful disposition in spite of affliction.

Circuit Court adjourned last week, having completed the docket. Except the action of the grand jury in getting after the boys, it was a very tame session of court. No case of any importance was tried. Annie England, a colored girl, who stole a purse from Mrs. E. L. England, was sentenced to the penitentiary for two years, and Sheriff Cooper took her to Frankfort Monday morning.

Jack Steel, who got drunk and frightened Mrs. Graves and daughter, was fined $40 and we understand he has gone to work on a farm near Penick, and has signed the temperance pledge.

John Carrico a smoky individual of this City, has taken up his abode at the county bastile. John don't bear a spotless reputation among those who know him best, and Saturday afternoon when Policeman Ark Thompson heard that John was trying to dispose of a pair of ladies' shoes, he suspicioned that there was something wrong so he hunted John up, the latter being unable to explain how he came into possession of the shoes, was placed under arrest. He was locked up until Monday afternoon when he was taken before Police Judge Pence for trial. To the Judge, John admitted that he got the shoes from Young & Co. The firm were as positive as John that the shoes came from their store, but they were equally sure that they were obtained surreptitiously. Consequently Judge Pence held the prisoner over to await the action of the grand jury.

Thomas Maple, Birkbeck, Ill., "I had a very bad case of kidney trouble and my back pained me so I could not straighten up. The doctor's treatment did me no good. Saw Foley's Kidney Cure advertised and took one bottle which cured me and I have not been affected since. I gladly recommended this remedy." Wood & Wimsatt.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says Geo. E. Caty, editor of the Guide, Washington, Va. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use, and a complete cure speedily followed. This remedy has also been used in my family for frost bitten feet with the best results. I cheerfully recommend its use to all who may need a first-class liniment." Sold by Haydon & Robertson.

Geo. C. Hickock, Curtiss, Wis. says: "Foley's Kidney Cure has been tested and found to be all you claim for it. I have given it to my father and it is the only thing that ever helped him." Wood & Wimsatt.

Arrested in Bardstown.

Mordical Gatewood, who has been traveling for several reliable nursery firms in this county, was arrested here yesterday on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. It is claimed that he represented himself as a tax collector and collected fifteen cents on back taxes from a negro woman by the name of Sallie Beeler, living in the Ashr's creek neighborhood. The gentleman is a comparative stranger in this community, but presents a good appearance, and the reputation of some of the witnesses against him seems to be a little unsavory, although they are very well known in this section. The trial is set for Saturday.—Bardstown Standard.

"I had a rushing sore on my breast for over a year," says Henry R. Richards of Willseyville, N. Y., "and tried a great many remedies, but got no relief until I used Banner Salve. After using one half box, I was perfectly cured. I cannot recommend it too highly." Wood & Wimsatt.

Blown Up

On Wednesday night unknown parties placed an unusually large quantity of dynamite around the newly erected toll-gate on the new Lancaster pike and caused same to be discharged. When it went off it made a terrible noise, breaking window panes for some distance around. The dynamite was not placed under the toll-house, but around the fork which holds the pole at the other side of the pike and it was blown to pieces. This is the only pike in this county, or possibly in this part of the State, which has a gate. When the county was purchasing the numerous pikes this one was left out. We are informed that this one would have been bought along with the rest had the owners not wanted to force the county to purchase one half of the Iron bridge, the whole of which, it is stated lies in Garrard county. The damages have been repaired, however, and Mr. Lee Case, the keeper, is doing business at the same old stand. —Danville News.

If people only knew what we know about Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, it would be used in nearly every household, as there are few people who do not suffer from a feeling of fullness after eating, belching, flatulence, sour stomach or water brash, caused by indigestion or dyspepsia. A preparation such as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, which, with no aid from the stomach, will digest your food, certainly can't help but do you good. Haydon & Robertson.

Practically Settled

Although the proposition to consolidate the Danville and Louisville Theological Seminaries, which has been the subject of three days debate before the Southern General Assembly, has not been finally settled, the adoption of the substitute offered on Wednesday by Dr. Winn, of Petersburg, which declares "that while the General Assembly may not approve of the wisdom of the step, it interposes no bar to the consolidation," is equivalent to ratification. The vote on Dr. Winn's substitute was 109 for to 60 against. This indicates the strong sentiment in favor of no interference and is construed by the friends of consolidation to mean that the project finally will be approved. In an interview with a reporter of the Louisville Times, Dr. Hemphill, of the Louisville Seminary and the Southern church, and a strong advocate of consolidation, says: "It leaves us free to go ahead with our consolidation project, and is all that is really necessary to accomplish the results desired."—Danville Advocate.

Mr. J. W. Baxter of North Brook, N. C., says he suffered with piles for fifteen years. He tried many remedies with no results until he used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve and that quickly cured him. Haydon & Robertson.

Mr. F. D. Arnold, Arnold, Ill., writes: He was troubled with kidney disease about three years. Had to get up several times during the night but three bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure effected a complete cure, he feels better than he ever did and recommends it to his friends. Wood & Wimsatt.

An Ancient Clock

Mr. Joseph Pence living on Polin just below Webbs Mills has a clock which he bought for 50 cents. The clock was sold in Elizbethtown more than one hundred years ago by Noah Willis to Isac Limos for fifty dollars who paid ten dollars on it and could not pay the remainder. George Cook, then a young man working in his shop bought the clock and kept it until his death, he then being an old man eighty years of age. Joseph Pence bought it at Cook's sale

Bryan on the Situation

"For Democratic principles we had a hard fight in 1896, a harder one in 1900, and I believe the hardest fight is to come in 1904 to keep those principles to the front. Being unable to win in an open fight, the reorganizers resort to fraud and deceit. Were they to prepare a platform and submit it to a primary voice of the Democracy, they would scarcely carry a precinct in the United States, but their work in the dark and are backed by the great Democratic daily newspapers and all the corporate interests of the country. They are becoming formidable. The trusts have more power for the party to day than they have had at any time since 1896. The men who went out of the party in 1896 are now shouting harmony and trying to wreck the Democratic party from within."

The Toy Graphophone

A Graphophone that children can play with and enjoy has been placed on the market. Nothing can bring greater happiness to a child, it is the most wonderful and fascinating toy ever invented. It repeats Mother Goose rhymes and nursery tales, sings the songs of childhood and plays martial music for the boys. In operation it is as simple as the turning of a wheel. There is no mechanism to get out of order, no springs to wind, no levers to work.

Unlike other types of Graphophones the Toy uses a flat disk record. These records come in sets of five each, one set being furnished with each machine. Other sets containing different selections can be easily obtained.

The Toy Graphophone gives no idea of the beauty and volume of reproductions of Graphophones and Phonographs using cylinders instead of disks. But it serves admirably as a toy to amuse and instruct children. Send $1.50 to the Columbia Phonograph Co., 93 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., and the Toy Graphophone will be sent you expressage prepaid.

The eleventh annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans began Tuesday at Memphis which has prepared liberal and elaborate entertainment for the old soldiers. It is estimated that 75 000 visitors are in the city. Gen. John B. Gordon will continue as Commander-in-chief The address of welcome was delivered by Gov McMillon and an oration by Bennett H. Young of Louisville. It is probable that Louisville will get the next reunion, but both that city and Dallas Texas are making a hard fight for it.

There is at least one early bird out for the Presidential nomination for the next term. A news item says Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, was formally announced as a candidate for President in 1904. The announcement was made by Harry S. New, Republican National Committeeman from Indiana.

"Our little girl was unconscious from strangulation during a sudden and terrible attack of croup. Quickly secured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Cure, giving her three doses. The croup was mastered and our little darling speedily recovered," so writes A. L. Spafford, Chester, Mich. Haydon & Robertson.

Shooting at Bardstown.

Baker Smith, Jr., shot and seriously wounded James Allen on Saturday evening, a little after six o'clock, in McCabe & Co.'s saloon, on Main Street in this city. The real causes is not known, but from several persons present we have learned the following:

Smith and Allen had quarreled in the afternoon and Smith ordered Allen out of his place. Allen returned later and he and Smith had a few words, when Smith pulled his pistol and fired the ball entering the right side, striking near the nipple and lodging in the right lung. Marshal Warrell had just entered the saloon and caught Allen as he fell. Medical assistance was called and Drs. Cox, Smith Redman and Williams responded. Allen was suffering severely and they did all they could to relieve him. He was removed to the Bardstown Hotel where he now is.

Smith was placed under arrest by Marshals Warrell and Merritt Coyle and taken before Judge Daugherty, who released him on a bond of $500, with Eugene Wilson, as security. The examining trial is set for next Thursday, but as the grand jury is now in session they will no doubt return an indictment against Smith. Dr. Roberts, of Louisville, who had been telephoned for, arrived here on Sunday night at 12 o'clock. He says that Allen has a fair chance for recovery. Allen's sister Mrs. Josie clark, of Missouri, and his aunt, Mrs. Henry Satherland, and other relatives are with him.—Record.

Courtship in Mexico.

A Mexican girl realizes she is a person of some importance when she has attracted the attention of a would be cavalier who has seen her at mass or during a promiscuous on the plaza. Without formality of introduction, he dispatches letters glowing with words of admiration and devotion, and nervously awaits a reply. In the mean time he visits the locality of her home, hoping to catch sight of the object of his admiration as she emerges from her house to go to church. He patiently but persistently promenades back and forward on the street, for custom forbids his entering the house, and is happy if he is favored with a glance from the lusterous black eyes. No ridicule is strong enough to dampen his ardor. Mexican lovers rarely meet, for even if the young man is related to the young lady and has been a visitor at the home, the mere fact of his paying attention to her puts a severe restraint on his intercourse with the family. After a time if things have progressed favorably, he is admitted as an accepted suitor, and is received by the girl always accompanied by her mother who usually does all the talking. But love finds many forms of expression, and as the suit progresses many an evening passes with the girl at the window or balcony and her lover in the street below, wholly oblivious of the passers by. The duration of a courtship depends upon the formality employed and means at command of the parties and their age. Consent for the marriage is demanded from the parents of the girl by the suitors father, that the pledge may be made more binding.

Warm Times on a Bloomfield Train.

Last Sunday morning several negroes of this place, among them Fisher Million, boarded the Bloomfield Branch train at Veech's Station, en route home. They had been to a big negro "festible" the night before. In a short time Million and another negro invaded the ladies' compartment, and Million uttered a vile and indecent remark to the other negro. Capt. Vanarsdale, the conductor, promptly secured a hickory club and used it on his head with a vengeance.

After this a negro section had complained to the conductor that he had been robbed of a silver watch. Capt. Vanarsdale suspected this bunch of negroes, and found the timepiece concealed under the hat of one of them. When the train reached Main street at this place the negroes got off two at a time leading Million, it was while watching them that some negro stepped up with a quart bottle of whisky and struck the conductor over the head, crashing the bottle into atoms. Fortunately his cap had a metal rim and he was not injured. Had he changed to a hat, which he usually does, he would have been killed or seriously injured. All the negroes, including Million, beat a most hasty retreat.—Shelby Sentinel.

The Fairfield Road a Certainty.

According to last Friday's Courier-Journal the electric railway from Louisville to Fairfield is a certainty, and will be completed by next fall. In speaking of the proposed enterprise, the Courier-Journal says:

The Board of Directors of the Louisville, Mt. Washington and Fairfield electric railway had a short meeting Thursday, and it was decided to begin work on the road within the next month. Rowland Cox, Chief Engineer of the road, stated that everything was favorable to building it, and it is expected to complete it by early fall. It is stated that Lexington capitalists, headed by John C. Mays, will back the enterprise. J. C. Wright will be secretary of the company.

The Bravery of a King

They are composing anthems to King Edward across the water these days. He is a real hero. The English editors say his name is a synonym for courage, and that he is a true descendant of the early Kings.

It was all on account of that accident to Lipton's yacht. When the club topsail and the spinnaker and jib and main brace and all the other ding dooles on Shamrock II. were falling and the cook was yelling murder, Edward was calm. Several things almost happened to him. It is possible that, for a moment, he forgot that he was a King, liable to have the top of his royal head batted off in the mixup. Anyway he hung on, and didn't "holler," which was about all that the occasion demanded.

"He remained cool" the English papers say, "and seemed to feel that yacht wrecks were but ordinary affairs, after all."

Perhaps the English people expected him to scoop "first" or "hurrah for Ireland!" or to make a lightning change of uniform, but he didn't. He remained cool, and probably never knew that he was really and truly a hero till he got home and saw it in the evening papers.—Cincinnati Post.

Painful Accident

Miss Ruby Tucker, while returning from a dinner party near Bloomfield one day last week met with a painful accident. The horse attached to the vehicle containing Miss Tucker and Messrs. John Purdy Jr., Milton Fullenwider, ran upon a rockpile and over turned the buggy. In attempting to jump, the young lady fell down an embankment, crushing her foot and spraining her ankle Mr. Fullenwider was also painfully injured about the face and head, but Mr. Purdy escaped uninjured. Miss Tucker is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Tucker, of Wood lawn, and has frequently visited the family of Mrs. Emma Wilson here. She has many friends in Bardstown who will regret her misfortune. At this writing she is reported to be rapidly improving.—Bardstown Standard.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

Scott's Emulsion

You will find it just as useful in summer as in winter, and if you are thriving upon it don't stop because the weather is warm.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

A Small That Helped.

The great Darwin, who learned so much about animals and their ways, tells many wonderful stories about them in the books he published. In one instance he attempts to show that lower animals have reasoning powers by citing the actions of a couple of snails that were placed in a walled garden. This garden was absolutely devoid of vegetation, and the poor snails began to suffer for want of food. One of them became ill. Then the strongest of the two evidently concluded that something had to be done. It seemed to hold a conversation with its sick companion and hurried away. The persons watching their actions concluded the sick snail had been deserted and left to die. Not so, however. The strong snail laboriously climbed over the wall and found a delightful garden adjoining, full of green leaves and plants. Then it turned back, crawled to its sick friend and "talked" with it again. At last the two started over the wall and in time were lost in the paradise that had been found.

The Big Ant.

Although the bee is one of the most wonderful of insects on account of the remarkable intelligence it shows, agriculturists are finding out things about the ant that place that little fellow even above the bee. Many traits of the ant seem almost human in their nature. In central Asia there is a species of ant of which Prof. Forel tells that are almost beyond belief. These ants are small in size, but once in awhile one of them forgets to stop growing until it is many times larger than his companions—a genuine ant giant. The small ants, however, make good use of the big fellow. When they desire to travel some distance, they scale upon the back of their big brother, and he carries them to their destination. When not serving as a riding horse, he is stationed at the door of the ant dwelling. He stands with his big head in the passageway, and when an enemy appears he looks so fierce that the intruder is glad to take to his heels.

Boy Champion Automobilist.

W. Westcott Humphreys of Germantown, Pa., who is in his twelfth year, is probably the youngest skilled manipulator of the automobile. He can manage the curves, come to a sudden stop and pick his way through crowded streets with the facility of an experienced adult. Master Humphreys' favorite diversion is to take his father and mother are enthusiastic devotees of the sport, but made serious objections when their son expressed an ardent wish to own a horseless vehicle of his own. But the boy gave such convincing proof of his ability that he won the day and now has his heart's desire. A recent enthusiastic show in Philadelphia he won the plaudits of a large audience for his dexterous handling of the automobile.

Knew His Brush.

Carlo was a dog and had been taught to carry the parcels home from the shops for his master. Sometimes, if they were going farther, the article that had been purchased would be pointed out to the dog, and he would be sent back for it later on.

One day a brush was bought in this way, and when Carlo was sent back for it the man had forgotten to cut the string that tied it to a whole bundle of other brushes and pack it up.

Carlo recognized the brush and without waiting to have it given him seized it in his mouth and made off, of course carrying the other brushes with him. The shopkeeper gave chase, shouting "Stop thief!" but Carlo only scampered off the faster and carried the brushes triumphantly to his master.

A Literary Contention.

In a school for colored children there was a little boy who would persist in saying "have went," says a contributor to The Christian Endeavor World.

The teacher kept him in one night and said:

"Now, while I am out of the room you may write 'have gone' 50 times."

When the teacher came back, he looked at the boy's paper, and there was, "Have gone 50 times." On the other side was written, "I have went home."

A Childish Incident.

An infant on the floor was raising
On bended arms and knees,
Bewitching things, yet nothing chasing,
When straight it somewhat sees

A sunbeam through the window glancing
Took to the floor its way;
The babe, toward the spot advancing,
Stooped down and kissed the ray.

An instinct in its bosom stirring,
The cause of hearty woke,
And, heedless of contempt lingering,
Its infant tongue spoke.

Straightway I left the child reproving
The coldness of my heart,
Which not heaven's brightest ray is moving
To grateful, loving part.

Always Finished the Kiss.

"A beautiful scene," said an old theater goer, "may be utterly ruined by some trifling mistake, and an error of seemingly infinitesimal dimensions throw out an entire company. Often times, however, the ready wit and presence of mind of an actor or actress may save the day and turn what might otherwise have been disaster into triumph. One of the most difficult of all scenes to carry off successfully occurs in the opera of 'Siegfried.' You will remember that, Siegfried awakens Brunnhilde from her long sleep with a kiss. Wagner has so arranged it that the kiss endures as long as the audience as the immortal slumber itself. In reality it lasts about 70 seconds, but it seems unending. It is a most trying situation for the singers, for the audience is extremely likely to grow restless.

"Some years ago at a performance of 'Siegfried' in St. Louis Alvary—poor chap!—was singing Siegfried to Mme. Seeber's Brunnhilde. He had got about half way through his lengthy osculation when the gallery began a succession of hisses, constantly increasing in volume. It was a critical moment; but, as the event proved, one that was to add to Alvary's already large wreath of laurels.

"Slowly he raised his magnificently handsome head and turned toward the audience and silently looked the gallery into silence. In four seconds he had completely mastered them, and you could have heard a pin drop in the great house. Then he dropped his face to that of Brunnhilde, and that kiss went on to its appointed and Sapholike finish without further interruption from the audience. It was as fine an exhibition of control a great personality can exercise over an audience as I have ever witnessed."—New York Tribune.

His After Dinner Speech.

There is no field of mental effort in which success is so under flattering form may be won quicker than in the after dinner platform. The man who can amuse and instruct such an audience, for instance, as that which assembles each year at the New England society dinner, perhaps the most critical in New York, may awake to find himself famous. A few hours before Henry W. Grady of Atlanta was to speak at the New England society's dinner in 1883 a correspondent of a Southern newspaper asked him what the would say, and he replied:

"The Lord only knows. I have thought of 1,000 things to say, 500 of which if I say they will murder me when I get back home, and if I say the other 500 they will murder me at the banquet."

The oration which the young, smooth faced toastmaster, almost unknown in New York, received at the dinner that night when the last ringing sentence of his speech had been spoken never has been equaled on a similar occasion, and his fellow citizens at home stood for hours in the rain in crowds waiting to greet him on his arrival at the spokesman of the new south. His progress from a local to a national reputation had been made in a bound. —Alaslee's Magazine.

One of the Queer Sights of Brooklyn.

"Speaking of queer things that happen in the course of a member of the finance department, 'a few nights ago I was going out on a late train on the Fifth avenue elevated road. There were few passengers in the car. Sitting opposite me was a demure looking Brooklynite with a large bundle under each arm. The bundles were closely wrapped with newspapers.

"Suddenly a violent internal movement agitated the bundle under the man's left arm, and a moment later the head of a large game rooster broke through the paper. As soon as the rooster's head was clear he crowed loud and defiantly. Then the bundle under the other arm heaved and struggled, another beak and comb appeared, and the crow of defiance was promptly answered by one of challenge.

"Then for five minutes those two roosters crowed at 30 seconds' intervals, while their owner struggled desperately to get them back into the wrappings where he had thought them effectually concealed. He indignantly refused the request of the other passengers to put them on the floor of the car and let them fight it out."—New York Sun.

The Talking Macaulay.

Macaulay is an (almost) never ceasing talker and pours out the prodigious stores of learning he will and whenever with such an absorption in his subject that I doubted when I heard him if he would not go on just the same if everybody left the room. Somebody asked the Duchess of Sutherland (after dinner at Stafford House) if he liked the society of women and whom he seemed to prefer. She answered, "Oh, he only looks upon us all in the light of interruptions."—Lady Granville's Records.

A Cup of Good Coffee

To get a really good cup of coffee you'll have to start back of the actual making; you'll have to look to the roasting and the grinding. In ARBUCKLES' you have a coffee that's scientifically roasted, and delivered to you with all the pores of the berry hermetically sealed. You're sure of a good cup of coffee because all the coffee flavor and aroma are kept intact until you want it. The fame of ARBUCKLES' induced other coffee packers to put out imitations of it. These imitations cost the grocer (and you) a cent a pound less than ARBUCKLES'. But don't be tempted to buy a package of some other coffee when you can get for it is actually less expensive than the cheap kind; goes further—besides being better flavored, more satisfying.

You will find a list of useful articles in each package of Arbuckles' Coffee. A definite part of one of these articles is required by her, you buy the coffee. The one you select from the list will be sent you on condition that you send to her Notion Department a certain number of signatures cut from the wrappers.

Profitable Change.

A well known conjurer one day visited a Scotch village. After performing many astonishing tricks he asked for a halfpenny, which a collier lent him. The conjurer then said he would turn it into a sovereign. He did so, as the people thought, and handed it around for them to see. When it reached the collier, he coolly pocketed it and said to the astonished conjurer, "Will ye change me anither?"—London Telegraph.

A Confidence Between Members.

"I understand," said one member of the legislature, "that the senator whom we recently elected was beat by footpads and robbed in Paris."

"Dear me," answered the other member, of the legislature. "I hope Frenchmen have such a brutal and direct method of getting a man's money away from him."—Washington Star.

Old Notions Revived.

Fortune has in some queer turns in her wheel. Lately she revived the old fifteenth century custom of wearing pomanders and other fragrant baubles attached to the person. Now she is going to restore the cameo brooches of our grandmothers and maiden aunts to their ancient place of honor. These brooches were greatly prized and figured often as bequests in the last wills and testaments of those who possessed them. Yet we have looked with disfavor on these large, heavy, conspicuous brooches and declined to wear them except when of quite small size. Filigree gold twists or bands seem far better suited to the chiffons of fashionable dress nowadays. As a work of art the cameo brooch has some claim on our consideration. Most modern cameos are now cut from seashell instead of the onyx or other rarer gem. Three different colored layers of shell are necessary for a good cameo—the dark background, the opaque or milky body whereon the figure was sculptured, and the third, which served to mark the hair, flowers, etc. The name cameo is said to be derived from the Arabic word for amulet, in the nature of which our ancestors probably at one time regarded them.—Philadelphia Ledger.

New York Federation.

Plans for the October meeting at Buffalo of the New York State Federation continue to take shape. The Hotel Genesee has been selected as headquarters instead of the Fillmore, at which it was impossible to secure adequate accommodations. The Wednesday afternoon meeting of the week's convention is to be held in the Temple of Music, on the exposition grounds. It will be in charge of the committee on philanthropy, Mrs. Townsend of Buffalo chairman. Among the speakers already announced are Mrs. C. B. Lowell of New York and Mrs. H. B. Montgomery of Rochester, each of whom will speak on some phase of the sociological work with which she is identified. Mrs. Katharine Bement Davis will speak on "Prison Reform" and Mary Kingsbury Simkovitch on "Settlement Work." A fine organ recital has been arranged for the afternoon by the committee on music, the numbers to be given before and after the regular programme.—New York Post.

Shallow Portrait Parties.

Making "shallow portraits" is one of society's latest amusements, and it is astonishing how much expression there is in a profile silhouette, especially if the artist is a bit of a caricaturist. He or she will sit down and with pencil and paper and with such an absorption in his subject that I doubted when I heard him if he would not go on just the same if everybody left the room. Somebody asked the Duchess of Sutherland (after dinner at Stafford House) if he liked the society of women and whom he seemed to prefer. She answered, "Oh, he only looks upon us all in the light of interruptions."—Lady Granville's Records.

When Coronets Are Worn.

The only occasion upon which a British peer or peeress wears a coronet is at the coronation of a sovereign. At the moment when the archbishop of Canterbury places the crown on the head of the new monarch every peer present at the ceremony dons his own coronet.

Enough to Retire On.

"That great Italian tenor told me he had a mattress stuffed full of the laurel wreaths that had been given him."

"A mattress full! Then he ought to retire on them."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

He leaves six brothers and four sisters besides a large family of his own. Two of his sons are practicing physicians in the State of Illinois. Dr. F. M. Grigsby at Springfield, Ill., and Dr. W. E. Grigsby at Blandinsville, Ill., his other son Dr. W. C. Grigsby is the jeweler and optician here. Deceased was a consistent member of the Methodist church. Burial on Wednesday at the Mt. Zion cemetery.

The closing exercises of Prof. Grants school took place at the Opera House on last Friday night and notwithstanding the bad weather a large audience witnessed the entertainment. The pupils who took part in the exercises all acquitted themselves with credit both to themselves and to their instructors. The musical part of the program, given by the young folks who had been under the instruction of Miss Bettie Irvine was especially good and the performance of the pupils showed the result of careful and efficient instruction. Prof Grant's school has closed a very successful year and the indications are for a continuation of its prosperity for next session.

There was a good crowd in town on Monday and business was lively. The horse market was particularly active and there were quite a number of private sales besides the public ones reported below. Campbell made report of the following sales: Cow and calf $35; one steer calf $8.25; two steers $14 50 each, five calves at $12 05 per head, cow and calf $30; cow and calf $35, eight 2 year-old steers at $24, four steer calves at $16.82 three steers at $15 50; one calf $8.80, one bull calf for $24.75; cow $20; cow $28 50; one combined mare $72; one horse $38.50, horse $45 50, mare $40, horse $35 mare $67.50, one plug horse $22.50, horse $50. COURT CONVENES.

The Regular May Term of the Washington Circuit Court now in Session

The May session of the Washington County Circuit Court began here Monday with Judge Patterson presiding. The juries were organized the first day and received their instructions from Commonwealth's Attorney Sweeney.

The following is the make-up of the Grand Jury: G. W. Bowen, Rich Smith, H. A. Hilton, J. J. Yates, T. F. Montgomery, J. F. Keene, S. G. Hayes, J. W. Willett, S. C. McGill, J. L. Wharton, E. E. Wakefield, John Armstrong. The following citizens compose the petit jury: T. S. Cloyd, S. T. Logsdon, T. D. Graham, C. R. Grundy, W. S. Clarkson. John C. Edelen, S. B. Thompson, John E. Carrico, Robt. Thompson. W. S. Hilton, W. T. Anderson, Jr.; L. T. Spalding, G. A. F. Walls, J. P. Buckman, J. R. Wharton, C. F. Hickerson, R. A. Thompson, Daniel Weill, James Arnold, C. S. Smock. R. B. Cregor, W. H. Milburn, W. H. Mullican, S. C. Hendren.

The commonwealths docket has been gone over and the following cases have so far been tried.

Albert Nunan for shooting on the public highway was fined $50 and costs.

Jeff Hughes undertook to sell liquor without providing himself with a license and the jury in his case assessed a fine of $20 with the trimmings.

Ben Spratt one of the young fellows indicted for horse stealing and whose trial is now on was fined $20 for disturbing a lawful assembly.

Abner Foster was found guilty of shooting on the public highway and fined $50 with the trimmings.

Theo Hall and George Prather were fined $5 each for being guilty of a breach of the peace.

The trial of Jim Hays for the murder of Ed Bishop was taken up on Tuesday. The crime was committed nearly a year ago and Bishop was shot by Hays after the two had quarreled over a crap game. Both of the parties were colored and the affair occurred in the Maple Hill neighborhood. Hays appears from the evidence to have had some justification as it was proven that the deceased had thrown a rock at him and was advancing with another.

The jury after having been out only a few minutes returned a verdict of not guilty. The defendant was represented by Hon. John W. Lewis, T. W. Simms, Jr., and W. F. Grigsby. Commonwealth Attorney W. H. Sweeney conducted the prosecution.

The trial of Jess Terrell and Ben Spratt charged with horse stealing was taken up today and is now in progress. This case is familiar to the readers of the NEWS-LEADER. A horse belonging to W. C. Foster disappeared from its owner's stable at Tatham Springs last winter and was afterwards traced to a point near Louisville where it was left by two men identified as Terrel and Spratt

WOMAN'S WORLD.

THE NEW PRESIDENT OF THE CHICAGO WOMAN'S CLUB.

The Evils of Tea Drinking—Girl's Essay on Picnics—Ladies, Beware of Germs—Lady of the Garter—The Girl Who Earns Her Living.

Mrs. Otto H. Matz, who has succeeded Mrs. Arthur Edwards as president of the Chicago Woman's club, is one of the most thoroughly respected women in Chicago. She is the wife of Otto H. Matz, the architect, and has always been prominent in educational, club and musical circles. She is an accomplished musician and absolutely devoted to her art. For nearly 15 years she has been closely identified with the prominent charities of the city, always giving of her time and strength to various philanthropic schemes. The big charity ball, which season after season was such an important social and philanthropic affair, drew forth some of her best efforts. Indeed, to her was accredited much of the success regularly attained by that function. While a zealous worker in the club which has so signally honored her and with which she has closely allied herself for nearly 15 years, she has never entered into its political side. The office of the presidency, therefore, comes to her as a distinct honor worthily bestowed.

MRS. OTTO H. MATZ.

The Evils of Tea Drinking.

Lady Jeune has been taking up the tea drinking question and has written with some warmth upon the habit of excessive tea drinking on the part of young women in domestic service, a habit which she believes to be increasing.

"I have no hesitation in saying that it is the constant drinking of strong tea which makes the women of our toiling masses delicate and their children anemic, for not only do these latter inherit that weakness from their mothers, but become even greater sinners in this direction than their parents. Nothing," she continues, "has more seriously injured the health of women of the working classes than the cheapening of tea."

The habit of drinking "stewed" tea is in the highest degree deplorable, for it is well known that it is the tannin in tea which is injurious, and this naturally is extracted in a very strong degree when the teapot is allowed to remain on the stove for an hour or more. Then, when cups of this obnoxious beverage are drunk promiscuously, supposedly to refresh the tired system and give one a "fillip up"—then is the harm done. In reality one is pouring so much poison into the system and utterly destroying the nerves. Lady Jeune's timely warning ought not to fall upon deaf ears. "In every well ordered household," she says, "the quantity of tea per head is regulated, and if that amount were adhered to the mischief would be lessened." There is nothing like a rigid adherence to laws of limit in cases where there is a tendency to overrun judicious quantities.

"Cocoa," continues Lady Jeune, "is not only harmless, but nourishing and can always be kept ready. The evil is, perhaps, even greater in the kitchen than in other departments of the house owing to the heat in which cooks and scullery maids have to work."

Girl's Essay on Picnics.

A bright pupil in the Girls' High school in Twelfth street, New York, was instructed to write for the edification of her class in English a brief essay on the approaching picnic season. She was evidently not partial to picnics, for here is what she wrote:

"May parties will soon be ripe, and the June walk season will follow hard upon. The difference between a May party and a June walk is a simple matter of chronology. Each has its queen of brief authority and its chaperon of absolute sway. Each has also its hamper, which is as deadly an enemy to the Manhattan populace as the frying pan to the Kansas farmhand. I took an inventory of one of these hampers last year, and, as I was a member of the physiology class at the time, it startled me out of a season's growth.

"When the hamper was opened, the chaperon drew forth one bag of sandwiches and one pie; one bottle of pickles, one pie; one sponge cake, one pie; one roast chicken, one pie; one bottle of lemon juice, one pie; one bag of assorted cookies, one pie; one dozen doughnuts, one pie; one package of biscuits and one pie. This was all, except that there were a few extra pies in the bottom for the purpose, I suppose, of forestalling famine.

"The chaperon wondered after luncheon why the girls and boys didn't enter into their play with as much zest as they did when they first arrived at the park. I didn't. I was studying natural history at the time, and only a few days before a lucid explanation had been given as to why the boa constrictor takes a month's nap after dining on far more digestible food than anything I saw in Central park that day."

Ladies, Beware of Germs.

Now it is the street car strap that is loaded with deadly germs. The latest tale of microbe woe comes from a woman who to protect a fresh pair of white gloves put her handkerchief over the strap while going to the theater a short time ago. On her way home she was again compelled to stand, and once more the handkerchief came between her glove and the leather.

Whether it was after that, or during the evening at the theater, that she once thoughtlessly put the handkerchief to her face is a detail that she does not recall, but two days afterward a pain on her lips became so intolerable that she was compelled to see a doctor, who found her suffering from incipient blood poisoning, which it was already too late for him to prevent. The most that he could do was to watch her carefully through a long attack of illness, which at one time threatened to end fatally.

He attributed this to some poisonous substance which had passed to her handkerchief from the strap, and that was his diagnosis the moment he heard the story of the ride on the trolley car. She fortunately recovered, and her physicians think that the present disfigurement to her face which resulted from the necessity of an operation will not be permanent. The case has convinced this physician, who is a man of considerable experience in surgery, of the dangers that lurk in the street car strap.—Chicago News.

Lady of the Garter.

The king is everywhere placing beside him in his public acts the gracious lady who is the partner of his throne. The innovation of creating her majesty a "Lady of the Garter" is, in fact, only a return to original precedent, for at the first creation of the order there were lady members. In the little church of Ewelme, Oxfordshire, may be seen to this day the memorial statue of one of the noble ladies who was an original "lady knight," and when her late majesty ascended the throne and became thereby sovereign of the most noble order a special messenger was sent to Ewelme to find out where the emblematical "garter" was worn on that effigy. It was found to be placed on the left arm above the elbow, and there Queen Victoria accordingly wore the strap of gold embroidered blue tissue with its buckle and loosely falling end, pendent therefrom. It can be seen distinctly in a portrait by Winterhalter painted in 1845. The garter is buckled on midway between shoulder and elbow round a short, white satin sleeve puff and half concealed by a lace bertha that passes round the shoulders. Her late majesty, however, never appointed any other "lady," and she held her own position by hereditary right as the reigning sovereign, so the inclusion of Queen Alexandra by the king is an interesting return to ancient precedent.—London Illustrated News.

Girl Who Earns Her Living.

In the sudden changes of fortune which have come to our business world during the last few decades many of our young girls, utterly unprepared, have often found themselves obliged to earn a livelihood not only for themselves, but for aged parents who have broken down under the strain of striving against circumstances or else perhaps for a tribe of little brothers and sisters whom death has left without support.

When such a girl cries, "What shall I do?" there is a stereotyped reply to be made—"Do whatever comes to hand, no matter what, so long as it is honorable, and educate yourself for something better"—for in a greater number of cases than could possibly be believed by one who did not know the aspirant for a business career lacks the ordinary education and perception which are a necessity for advancement in the business world. It is perhaps trite to say that the last decade of the nineteenth century shows an advance entirely out of proportion to that of any previous ten years, because it is a self evident fact to all thinking minds. But it is sometimes good for one to have a self evident fact borne in upon one's consciousness, since one is apt to grow careless in observing the significance of everyday things.

The Spoon Collecting Fad.

"I don't object to fads on principle," said the proprietor of a fashionable Broadway restaurant to a reporter for the New York Times the other day, "but there is one in vogue now that I would like to see run its course and give way to one which respects the rights of property. The young women of this town have a craze for collecting restaurant spoons. They don't care for them at all, however, unless they bear the mark of the house from which they were filched. No, they don't take them themselves. The average young woman, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding, is timid when in a public dining room. They simply intimate to their gentlemen acquaintances that they appreciate such things, and the men—they do the rest.

"I can't say how many I have lost from good customers whom I couldn't call down even if I were to catch them red handed. The customer of a place like this is likely to be worth several hundred dollars in the course of a year, and a few spoons more or less would not cut down our profits to any large extent, but the practice is annoying, and for that reason more than any other I would like to see it abandoned."

Gainsborough's Duchess.

Lady Elizabeth Foster, whose portrait by Gainsborough has just been recovered—she was not Duchess of Devonshire at the time it was painted—had greater beauty but less charm than her friend, Georgiana Spencer, duchess of Devonshire, who kissed the butcher to get his vote. Married, as his second wife, to the fifth duke of Devonshire in 1806, she ruled London society with a rod of iron and, together with her equally beautiful sister, Lady Duncannon, rendered it so exclusive that the regent once asked whether the duchess would allow the royal family to attend the opera. The later years of her life, after she became a widow, were mostly spent in Italy and especially in Rome, where she was welcomed at the Vatican. She devoted herself to the study of archæology, and to her enterprise the world owes the discovery and preservation of the column of Phocas in the Forum. She died childless in 1824. There exists a full length portrait of this beautiful woman at Chatsworth by Sir Thomas Lawrence.

The Serpent Bracelet.

Although one might naturally wonder why Eve's fair daughters would ever care to wear a serpent, still they do, and at the jewelers' the reptile of graceful sinuosity is one of the most approved motifs of ornamentation. The old time snake bracelet has come into style again and is exhibited as the very latest novelty for the adornment of milady's fair arm.

These new bracelets of shimmering lengths of gold are exquisitely beautiful in the simulation of the snake's scaly surface and in their graceful flexibility. A glittering jewel forms the eye of the serpent—a diamond, emerald, ruby or sapphire.

These bracelets can be worn coiled around madame's arm or clasping her neck or as a girdle encircling her waist. One of the most superb novelties in up to date belt beauty is a golden serpent with jewel eye, which coils its glittering length around the waist, its head pointing downward in the front, giving the long waisted effect fashion now decrees.

Baby's Crib and Bedding.

The best crib for a baby is not a swinging basinet or any swinging or rocking cradle, but a crib of liberal size which stands firmly on its legs and is large enough for the child until it is old enough to sleep in a regular bed.

The pillow of the baby's bed should be a flat one, of hair, not over two inches thick.

The best bed coverings for a baby are sheets of cambric or linen in summer and soft blankets of pure Californian wool, which are as warm and light as down and are much more wholesome, in winter.

The coverlet of the baby's bed may be of any dainty hued wash silk. This covering will protect the blankets as well as a heavier counterpane of cotton. It is important that this outside coverlet as well as the other belongings of the crib should be washable and something that will not be injured by frequent sunning and airing.—American Mother.

Handy Measures.

Many useful measures can be found in the body. The first finger is usually 4 inches long, 2 inches from the knuckle to the next joint and 2 inches more to the tip. From the tip of the middle finger to the elbow is about 16 inches on an average, and the distance from finger tip to finger tip of the outstretched hands is about 6 feet—the fathom, from fadham, "to embrace."

Individuals vary in these respects. But if once for all you measure the exact length of your finger, your arm, your outstretched hands and your foot or boot you will have permanent measures always with you which may prove very useful.

WINE OF CARDUI

No External Symptoms.

The blood may be in bad condition, yet with no external signs, no skin eruption or sores to indicate it. The symptoms in such cases being a variable appetite, poor digestion, an indescribable weakness and nervousness, loss of flesh and a general run-down condition of the system—clearly showing the blood has lost its nutritive qualities, has become thin and watery. It is in just such cases that S. S. S. has done some of its quickest and most effective work by building up the blood and supplying the elements lacking to make it strong and vigorous.

"My wife used several bottles of S. S. S. as a blood purifier and to tone up a weak and emaciated system, with very marked effect by way of improvement. We regard it a great tonic and blood purifier."—J. F. Duff, Princeton, Mo.

SSS is the greatest of all tonics, and you will find the appetite improves at once, strength returns, and nervousness vanishes as new rich pure blood once more circulates through all parts of the system.

S. S. S. is the only purely vegetable blood purifier known. It contains no minerals whatever. Send for our free book on blood and skin diseases and write our physicians for any information or advice wanted. No charge for medical advice.

The Welcome

At the door from a happy, healthy wife, is something which the husband looks forward to all through the day's labor. He may be tired, but his step lightens and his face brightens as he quickens his pace to receive the smiling welcome of his wife. What a difference in the home-coming of the man whose wife is nervous and gloomy, having neither heart nor strength to be glad. Many such a husband has worked a transformation in his home-life by learning of the cures performed by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures diseases of the delicate organs, builds up the nerves, induces refreshing sleep, and transforms the sickly woman into the happy helpmeet.

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription" and it is absolutely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

"My wife was sick for over eight years," writes Albert H. Fulte, Esq., of Altamont, Grundy Co., Tenn. "She had uterine disease and was treated by two physicians, but got no relief. At last I read in one of your Memorandum Books, about Dr. Pierce's medicines, and we decided to try his 'Favorite Prescription.' I sent to the drug store and got one bottle, and the first dose gave ease and sleep. She had not slept any for three nights. Being sure that it would cure her I sent for five more bottles, and when she had taken the sixth bottle she was sound and well. We now have a fine boy at our house."

English Ideas of Lynching.

At a recent dinner in London the conversation turned on the subject of lynchings in the United States. It was the general opinion that a rope was the chief end of man in America. Finally the hostess turned to an American, who had taken no part in the conversation, and said:

"You, sir, must have often seen these affairs."

"Yes," he replied, "we take a kind of municipal pride in seeing which city can show the greatest number of lynchings yearly."

"Oh, do tell us about a lynching you have seen yourself," broke in half a dozen voices at once.

"The night before I sailed for England," said the American, "I was giving a dinner to a party of intimate friends when a colored waiter spilled a plate of soup over the gown of a lady at an adjoining table. The gown was utterly ruined, and the gentlemen of her party at once seized the waiter, tied a rope around his neck and, at a signal from the injured lady, swung him into the air."

"Horrible!" said the hostess, with a shudder. "And did you actually see this yourself?"

"Well, no," said the American apologetically. "Just at that time I was down stairs killing the chef for putting mustard in the blancmange."—Modern Society.

Kind Heartedness.

The gingham shirted boy had made a break to pass the ticket seller at the circus entrance, but that gentleman had caught him and rudely thrust him back.

"Poor little devil!" said a seedy looking man in the crowd. "If I had the money, I'd buy him a ticket myself."

The crowd looked sympathetic, but said nothing, while the boy sobbed as if his heart would dissolve.

"I've only got a nickel, little feller," went on the seedy looking one, "and that won't do you no good. Say," he continued, turning suddenly to the crowd, "let's do one good act in our lives. Let's buy him a ticket."

It looked for a minute as if a collection was to be started, but a benevolent looking old gentleman nipped it in the bud by slipping a half dollar into the hand of the boy, who promptly disappeared into the tent.

"I thank you a thousand times for that kind act, sir," said the seedy looking man.

"You seem to take quite an interest in the little fellow," remarked the benevolent one.

"Well," I should think I ought to," answered the seedy looking man proudly. "That's the only son I got!"—Indianapolis Sun.

A Lesson In Politeness.

The Philadelphia Record says that a railroad contractor who recently returned from abroad tells of an experience that befell him in Munich illustrative of the difference in prevailing customs. Armed with a number of letters of introduction to European railroad officials, he made it a point to inquire into the workings of the various systems and was treated with uniform courtesy.

At Munich he thought he had acquired all the information he was after, and as he passed out of the office of the man with whom he had been talking he put on his hat. He had scarcely been ushered out when it occurred to him that there was one matter about which he had forgotten to inquire.

"I immediately retraced my steps," said the Philadelphian, "and again entered the office, neglecting to remove my hat. I saw the same official with whom I had been talking, and, apologizing for taking up so much of his time, I put the question to him. Without a word he reached up, took off my hat and placed it in my hand. Then he answered my query and bowed me out. It made me feel rather cheap."

On a Business Basis.

Gerald developed a journalistic instinct at the early age of 14. With the consent of his father and some assistance from the same source he bought an "amateur printing outfit" and started the Elmhurst Monthly Journal, subscription price 25 cents a year, payable in advance.

"I suppose you call yourself the editor and proprietor of this office," remarked an envious young associate who dropped in at his "sanctum" in the basement of the paternal dwelling one day.

"Of course I do," responded the youthful journalist. "I don't owe a cent on it."

"Proprietor! Humph! Everybody knows you got $25 from your father to start it with."

"Yes, sir," stoutly rejoined Gerald, "and his subscription for The Journal is marked paid 100 years ahead on my books!"—Youth's Companion.

The Latest Fad.

The popularity of "ping-pong" is causing it to figure in a luxurious form among the wedding presents of the moment, a recent bride having received, with no small satisfaction, a pair of battledoors, exquisitely made, with gold capped handles, the vellums bearing the initials of the bride, beautifully illuminated. As a social philosopher has remarked, "Originality is the mother of imitation, and the idea will be largely taken up, as it admits of much variety and the indulgence of personal tastes, and if something exceptionally fascinating is desired the handles can be jeweled as well as gold mounted."

Prepare Flower Beds With Great Care.

It is important that the soil of one's flower beds should be properly prepared for the reception of seeds. It should be worked over until it is fine and mellow and made rich enough to support a strong and vigorous growth of whatever is sown in it. Keep turning and stirring it until it is as fine and mellow as it is possible to make it. Incorporate the fertilizer used with it thoroughly. Manures not well worked into the soil are likely to bring about a "spotty" development which is far from satisfactory.—Eben E. Rexford in Ladies' Home Journal.

Look at your nails, and if they are blue your heart is rather weak and you ought not to run up stairs or go for a cycle ride. If on a calm day you want to know in what direction the slightest current of air is moving, wet your finger and hold it up. It feels cool on the side where the breeze strikes it, owing to the evaporation.

The pretty, shy little forgetmenot is in danger of having its head turned by all the attention it is receiving from the artists of the millinery world. It is the smartest of the small flowers used on hats this season, and small flowers, by the way, are all very smart.

A Cold Snub.

Hostess—Are you a musician, Mr. Jones?

Jones (who is dying to give an exhibition of his powers)—Well—er—yes, I think I can lay claim to some knowledge of music.

Hostess—I am delighted to know it. My daughter is about to play, and I should be very glad if you would kindly turn over the music for her."

Made the Application.

"How are things?" the barber asked pleasantly of the shrinking man in the chair.

"Dull, very dull!"

And the knight of the razor looked for a moment as if he thought the remark was personal.—Philadelphia Times.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

His Hair Stood on End.

"Up to five years ago," said a prospector to a St. Louis Republic reporter, "I didn't believe in such a thing as a man's hair standing on end." And then the old gentleman told the story of the fright that led him to change his mind:

"I was in the mountains of Idaho with a friend, and we ran short of fresh meat, so one day I took my gun and started off alone. I went into a ravine and was making my way along a little brook when I came suddenly upon a queer sight. Not four feet in front of me, in the full blaze of the sun, lay four mountain lions asleep.

"For half a minute I thought them dead, but as I stood staring at them, with my heart in my mouth, every one of them sprang up with a growl. And they faced around at me, looking ugly, sniffing the air, with their whiskers drawn back, showing the white line of their teeth, switching their tails and looking like demons.

"As for me, I stood rooted to the spot. I couldn't move from sheer fright. A queer, numb sensation began in my ankles and crept up my body, and I literally felt my hair rise.

"I stood there motionless for several minutes. Then one of the beasts dropped his tail and whined. The others followed his example. My presence mystified them. A few seconds later they turned about and crept away down the ravine, looking back stealthily two or three times to see me.

"When they were out of sight, I began to breathe again. I didn't care to hunt any more that day and made for the camp at top speed. That was the time my hair stood on end, and my scalp was sore to the touch for a week afterward."

A Careful Mother.

This is a story one woman is never tired of telling of a mother whose child had been ill with scarlet fever. She always emphasizes the fact, too, that the mother was possessed, upon ordinary occasions, with good sense and would be called a more than ordinarily intelligent woman. She was, too, a more than ordinarily careful mother, and it was as an illustration of this that she told the story of the care of her boy to the friend who now repeats it. Not as much was known about sanitary conditions then as now, but it was not in a time of primitive ignorance.

"I always believe in taking the greatest care to prevent contagion in any disease," said the mother, "and with the fever I was extraordinarily careful. Why, when the skin began to peel I rubbed the child down with my hands every day to remove every loose fragment, let it fall into a cloth, and then I gathered it up carefully and shook it out the window."

The listener to that story laughed then and there, to the great surprise and indignation of the mother, and laughs now at the ridiculous ignorance of a woman who claimed to have even a vestige of common sense.—New York Times.

Will-o'-the-Wisp Salvation.

A well known rector of an east end church was approached one day by a lady who said she desired to rent a seat in a row nearest the door of his church. The rector responded that the seats in that row were all free and that she was at liberty to occupy any one of them, but she persisted, saying that she desired to have it for her own.

Being somewhat curious as to her reasons, the clerical gentleman said, "But, madam, tell me why you wish to sit so far back?"

After some hesitancy she responded that she simply couldn't bear to have any one "sit behind her."

"Yet you will be sitting behind others, who perhaps feel the same way," said the rector laughingly.

"That may be," replied the devout lady earnestly, "but you know I have such a wretched little wisp of hair at the back of my head that it would certainly interfere with my devotions if I knew any one was looking at it."—London Tit-Bits.

OUR GROWTH.

Paid Certificate Holders to September, 1898	$ 631 00
" " " May, 1900	72,000 00

The Lexington Investment Company does business on a life insurance basis by reversing the plan.

Live Insurance Companies pay large sums to the few of their members who die.

We pay a smaller sum to all of our members as their coupons die.

The Lexington Investment guarantees to pay to its members three dollars for every one redeived from them.

The Lexington Investment Co. is an improvement over all other plans of Investment Cos.

1. Because it pays more money.
2. Because after the third payment the member is eligible to receive a cash income which increases his payments in the meantime, decreasing until the certificate is killed.
3. Because it redeems its coupons in a regular consecutive order and has a so called numeral drawings or lottery features attached to it by which i possible to favor the few at the expense of the many.
4. Because after three years, if the certificate is not killed, the holder may obtain a "paid up" certigcate and cease paying on same, his remaining cuopons being redeemed thereafter in their regular order.

Our strength, like life insurance, lies in our membership; but unlike Life Insure our field of business is unlimited, as everybody is eligible to membership. No medical examination required
